If you didn't ride a school bus growing up, you can probably still imagine them: two aisles of noisy children pulling one another's hair, throwing spitballs and generally making trouble.

According to the bus drivers, the heroes in our scenario, that isn't too far from the truth.

"They say a bus driver's problems are all behind him," said Floyd Folwell, who jokingly says he's been driving school buses for "too long," although it's only been about two years.

The Upland School District employs six regular bus drivers who spend five hours a day coping with their young passengers.

"The biggest problem is screaming and throwing objects at each other," said Stan Swieca, director of the school's bus department. Swieca, who has been a department employee for 18 years and its director for 15 of those years, has been known to fill in as substitute driver until March of this year.

Swieca said he hires his drivers for both their driving skill and their patience with children. He's also had to look out during job interviews for problems like drug abuse in recent years, he said.

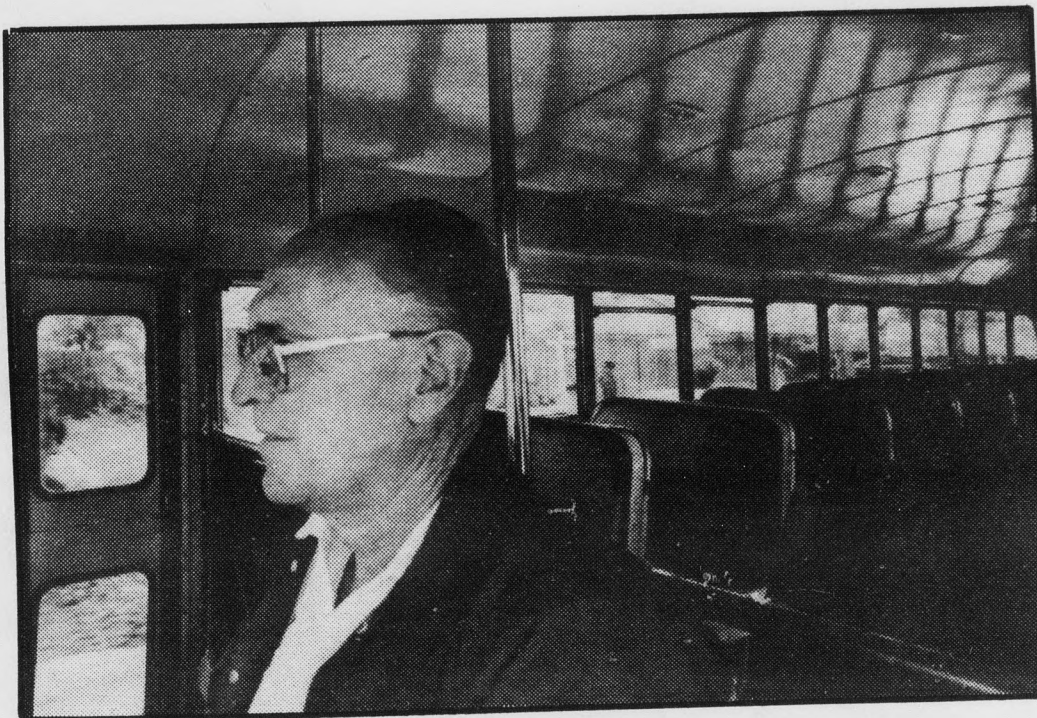

"If I suspect it, I kind of want to stay away from someone," he said.

Swieca's crew has had a good safety record, he said, with accidents limited mostly to fender-benders. He can't remember a single injury accident, he said.

In addition, safety is an important factor when he designs the bus routes, he said. He tries to avoid left turns on busy streets and makes most of the stops on the same side of the street on which the bus is stopped. If the children have to cross the street, they are escorted by the driver, he said.

Bus drivers sometimes have a

difficult time getting fellow drivers to take the children's safety as seriously. The drivers said that motorists often fail to stop when the bus's red lights are flashing, although they are required by law to do so.

"I ran out in front of a car once when she (the auto's driver) didn't stop once," remembered Folwell.

Swieca maintained that he can tell where a person comes from, based on the respect the motorist shows for school buses.

"When a person stops just because the bus stops, I know the person is from back east," said Swieca, who hails from the Midwest, himself.

But the most trouble the drivers have is with the youngsters themselves.

On a recent bus ride, the homeward bound passengers were so loud that a driver unused to the din might easily have gotten a splitting headache. But Swieca's crew is well-seasoned by now and has learned to expect it, especially in the afternoons.

"We also find that in the morning the children are quite peaceful and in the afternoon they're all hyped up. They seem to want to let themselves out because they've been locked in classrooms all day," Swieca said.

"You wouldn't think they were the same kids," Folwell added.

Folwell knows most of his passengers by their stop, if not by name.

"The ones that cause more trouble, I know their names 'cause I've written them citations," he said, adding "The ones that cause you trouble in the first grade cause you trouble the whole way though. They just have more time to think up things to do."

And what do the children think of their daily ride?

"It's better than going to the YMCA," said Mandy Davis, 8. "You get to talk." □

Youth's balloon travelled more than 1,800 miles

By Suzanne Sproul

Eddyville, Iowa will be the spot to beat next year.

Nine-year-old Michael Johnson of Foothill Knolls School in Upland said he didn't even know where the small town (60 miles southeast of Des Moines) is located, but was excited anyway when he heard a balloon he launched traveled so far.

"I was surprised. I do it every year and it never comes back," the fourth grader said.

Johnson and his fellow classmates purchased 50-cent balloons and participated in a balloon launch last month honoring National Library Week.

Students each year launch balloons with notes attached asking anyone who may find them to return the note.

Principal Randy Smith said balloon cards typically are returned from Riverside, and last year one was sent back to the school by a person who found it on the 16th hole of the Upland Golf Course.

"But 1,850 miles, the distance from Upland to Eddyville, is the farthest we've had," Smith said.

Although the returned note was a nice surprise for Johnson, it came with an added bonus — it arrived on his birthday, May 2.

His classmates in room 5 cheered and applauded him when they heard the news.

Since Johnson is the undisputed winner of the "longest balloon launch," he will receive a collection of library books, the principal said.

Charles and Jacque Hough of Iowa mailed back the card and a short letter.

"We live on a farm in Iowa. We are located about 60 miles southeast of Des Moines, Iowa. We were very surprised to find your card out in our windbreak. My husband, Charlie, was going out to check our beef cows (that are calving), when he saw the balloon tangled in a weed. The balloon still had some helium in it," Mrs. Hough wrote.

She told Johnson that they are a young farming couple who recently had their first child, Craig.

"We were wondering when you released the balloon from your school. Because we are very curious about how long it took it to get to Iowa. We sure would enjoy hearing back from you," she wrote.

Wind conditions must have been right, because the balloon arrived in the small Iowa farm town one day after it was launched, Smith said.

Will Johnson pay another 50 cents next year to enter the balloon contest?

"I sure will," he said. □

R.C. nears annexation of mine site

Rancho Cucamonga moved one step closer last Tuesday toward getting approval to annex the proposed site of a controversial mining operation in Etiwanda.

The county flood control district Zone One Advisory Committee voted 4-1 May 13 to recommend that the county Board of Supervisors support the city's request to annex the land, providing that a suitable development agreement can be worked out.

Rancho Cucamonga Community Development Director Jack Lam said the city submitted a letter of request for support for the annexation attempt to the board, and the board referred it to the Zone One Advisory Committee.

"The committee gave a recommendation for support, providing that the city and the flood control district negotiate an acceptable contract," Lam said.

Mike Walker, director of the county flood control district, said committee members had numerous concerns about the zoning of annexed flood control land that may become surplus after the Day Creek project is completed.

The development agreement should "allow the flood control district to get the highest and best use out of those lands," he said.

Walker said he would try to get the advisory committee's recommendation onto the June 2 board agenda.

Chaffey College instructor leads lobbying effort

By Marianne Aiken

Students drifted in and out of Tim Arner's office at Chaffey College's math learning center last Wednesday afternoon, seeking help with their homework and asking him to grade their tests.

"I'm supposed to leave at two," he said, "but I'll probably be here until four answering questions."

The tutor that used to work in the center on Wednesday nights was laid off. Now, when Arner, an associate professor, goes home, there's one tutor in the office three nights a week to deal with students who might need help with their math.

That's part of the reason why Arner took 120 people, mostly students, to Sacramento for Community College Lobbying Day May 12 to lobby for additional funds for community college education.

"This is probably why I'm involved," Arner said. "I don't have enough assistance. That's definitely one of the first places they cut."

The Sacramento trip was the highlight of the year for People For Community Colleges (PFCC). PFCC was spawned during last year's lobbying trip to Sacramento by 150 people from Chaffey College.

On Saturday, May 10, for the second year in a row, the group got on a bus for a nine-hour ride to Sacramento. This year they had time to learn how to lobby before they met local lawmakers the following Monday to try to get $70 million in augmentation funds to the governor's 1986-87 budget.

Arner said only 40 other people from community colleges around California showed up for the statewide lobbying day.

"I think that epitomizes the problems community colleges are always being accused of," Arner said.

They lobbied for open access to community colleges; money for more entrance testing, counseling, and tracking of students' academic progress; and against the concept of restricting students who test below a certain level from entering community colleges.

The beefed-up matriculation program, estimated to cost $50 million, will help improve the image of the state's 106 community colleges, Arner said.

"Part of the negative image we've had is that students are directionless, and are not taking the classes they're supposed to be taking," he said.

Students also talked to legislators about not being able to get the classes they want, not being able to get tutoring or financial assistance, and about schedules that didn't work out because of cutbacks.

Over 3,300 Second District voters & EVERY city Councilmember in Upland, Fontana and Rancho Cucamonga (except his opponent) signed Supervisor Cal McElwain's nomination petition.

Here are a few good reasons why so many people support Supervisor Cal McElwain's re-election:

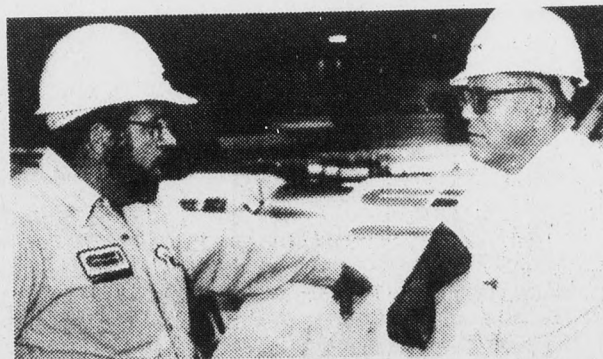

- Initiated the County Foothills Plan to assure continuity of development above your city AND to insure your city has input into the County's development plans.
- Supported and involved in negotiations to obtain land for Red Hill Park.
- Obtained temporary funding for Senior Citizens "hot meals" program when funding was delayed.
- Opposed the State's attempts to make the lands north of Rancho Cucamonga into a mining preserve.
- Gave key testimony in Sacramento to convince the California Transportation Commission to reinstate $7.3 MILLION for the Foothill Freeway.

We're NO. 1 in State for New or Relocating Plants!

Cal McElwain pushed to eliminate the County Department of Economic Development and to contract with an outside consultant to do a better job.

The results:

- 23 new manufacturing plants (TRIPLE that of 1984)!
- 3,500 new jobs initially. Capital investment of $100 million.
- San Bernardino County has had more new business and relocations than any other county in the State.

Cutting County Bureaucracy, Saving Over $8.7 MILLION

Supervisor Cal McElwain supported measures to eliminate several County departments and consolidate others saving taxpayers millions of dollars each year.

Without cutting services, Cal currently is pushing for measures to save an additional $652,000, just by reorganizing and streamlining County government.

"I've consistently proposed and voted for measures to save YOU . . . the taxpayer . . . money and still maintain vital services," says Supervisor McElwain.

LEARNING THROUGH VIDEO — the Upland Kiwanis club recently donated $675 worth of video equipment to the Upland School District for special education. USD opts to keep own bus service

Even though it means substantial expense, the Upland School District decided last week to keep its own transportation service at least one more year.

The district investigated contracting out for its bus service, as many other districts have done in the past few years, according to Superintendent George Renworth.

The district could save as much as $50,000 by hiring a private service and shutting down its own 15-bus system, which operates for about $250,000, Renworth said.

But the board followed his recommendation to keep its own system for another year.

"We think that we can provide a little better service than you can by contracting out," he explained. "I think, obviously, the school district has direct supervision over the school buses and the drivers — more control."

Renworth added that the district will try to save money by canceling some stops and consolidating them with others.

"We practically stop at every block," he said.

Routes also may be reorganized to become more efficient, he said, and some children may be dropped from the service.

Summer adventure awaits teen-agers

RAQUETTE LAKE, NEW YORK — As families are making summer vacation plans, here is a special opportunity for the teen-ager with a flair for adventure.

The National Student Leadership Trip is a non-profit, 8,500-mile journey across America for the adventure-minded teen-ager. Forty high school students will visit communities across the United States in an effort to see the American culture in its many facets.

This bus trek will take them to Indian Reservations, working farms in the Midwest, large cities and small communities in the "middle of somewhere."

Students between the ages of 14 and 17 are eligible for this program. They must be in good health and interested in a high energy summer experience.

The group will be camping out in national and state parks most of the way across the country.

There are five professional adult leaders on this trip, which is sponsored by the National Student Leadership Center based in Raquette Lake.

The trip leaves from Washington, D.C., on June 28. It returns to the Nation's Capitol on Aug. 9. The fee for the entire trip including all meals, travel and equipment is $1,750. A number of students have been sponsored by local organizations for a portion of their fee.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for a student to really see America," said Elliott Masie, director of the center. "The students will learn a number of key leadership skills while they are having a wonderful time. They will meet the leaders of our country and also understand how to get along with a wide range of fellow group members."

For a complete set of information on the trip, call (800) 348-7246 or write: National Student Leadership Center, Sagamore Road, Raquette Lake, N.Y. 13436.

Abandoned home in R.C. becomes a point of irritation

By Marianne Aiken

At the end of a cul-de-sac on a residential street in Rancho Cucamonga sits a house that has been abandoned for about 1½ years.

Jim and Cheryl Smith live next to the house on Montara Avenue, and they don't like it.

"There have been at least 100 people that have come by and looked at it," said Cheryl Smith.

The parade of the curious has become a little irritating to the Smiths.

"I want to put a sign on the door that says, 'No, we don't know anything about the house next door,'" Jim Smith said.

Aside from people who are looking to buy the house, which is in a neighborhood of homes in the $90,000 range, the place is also a magnet for juveniles and vandals. The Smiths can always tell when someone is in the house next door because their three dogs start barking.

On the morning of May 1, there was a fire in the house, which a Sheriff's Department spokesman said is being investigated as a possible arson.

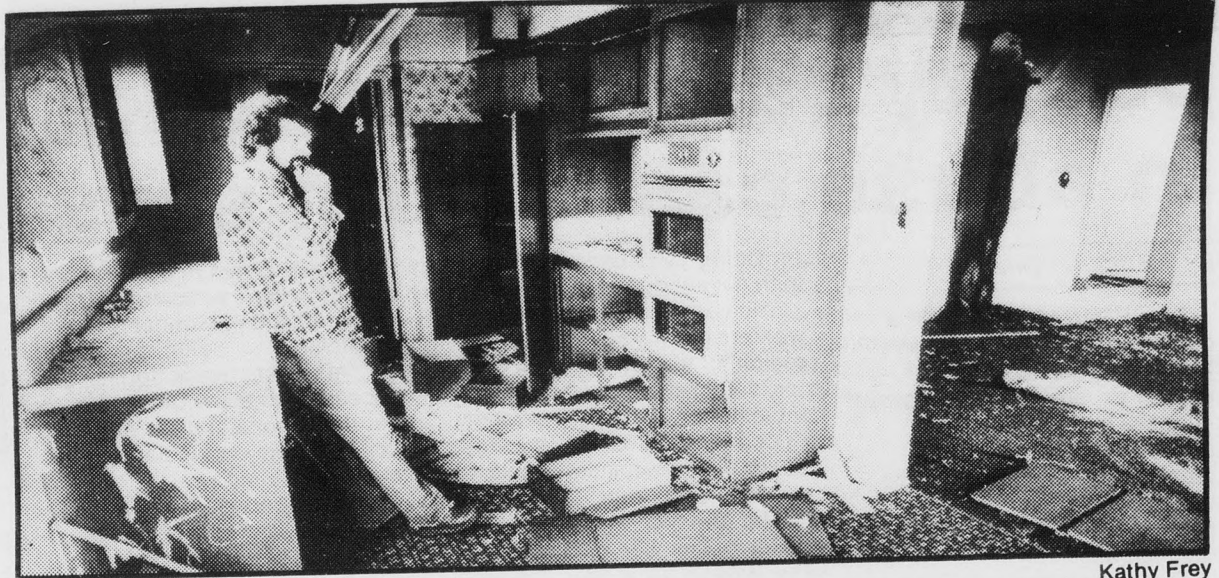

The noise of the fire engines didn't wake Jim Smith, who was sleeping because he works nights.

"Jim and all my dogs could have all gone up in smoke," Cheryl Smith said. "That doesn't make me feel very safe living next door."

The Smiths claim there have been numerous juvenile arrests at the house, although a Sheriff's Department spokesman said he didn't recall any arrests, and could not confirm any because of a policy of withholding the names of juveniles.

"I don't recall any arrests on that street at all," said Sgt. J. D. Harris.

Most frustrating to the Smiths

Kathy Frey

Jim Smith stands inside an abandoned house at 7715 Montara Ave. in Rancho Cucamonga. Smith and his wife said they don't like living next door to the house, which is a magnet for vandals.

is what they claim is a lack of action by the city in taking care of the problem at 7715 Montara.

The city's code enforcement efforts have been stymied because the house is owned by a corporation whose address is listed as a post office box in Costa Mesa. City planner Brad Buller said the city has identified the owner, through county tax assessment rolls, as Paul Piazzese.

R.C. property owners less likely to abandon homes

Disappearing property owners and the targets for vandalism they leave behind now are less common in Rancho Cucamonga than they were 10 years ago.

The number of abandoned houses in the city is directly linked to the economy, said Rancho Cucamonga City Manager Lauren Wasserman.

"In the 1970s it was a very common problem," Wasserman said. "There were literally hundreds of houses abandoned by people who just walked away from their loan commitments."

City planner Brad Buller estimated that there are about a dozen abandoned houses in the city now.

Wasserman said Neighborhood Watch groups can be instrumental in identifying abandoned properties.

"There isn't a whole lot the city can do except inspect it," Wasserman said. "We generally can find the owners if we need to, through title companies and things like that. Getting them to do things is a different problem."

The city has no formal program to deal with the problem of abandoned houses, Wasserman said, but handles them on a case-by-case basis.

"As problems arise, we make an assessment and see what needs to be done," he said.

County can't handle hike in abuse cases, firm says

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — The county's Child Protective and Placement Service (CPPS) agency experienced a 25 percent increase in the number of abused children referrals it received in 1985, and both the county workers and foster parents are inadequate to handle the increase.

That conclusion was reached by the auditing firm of Deloitte, Haskins and Sells, which was hired by the county grand jury last year to investigate complaints about the agency's ineffectiveness.

The audit released last week said the CPPS received 10,686 referrals of abused children in 1985 which created excessive caseloads for social workers leading to a "chronic worker and retention problem."

"Such excessive caseloads preclude adequate case management, time for staff training, and may result in serious liability for the county if workers fail to exercise adequate case planning," the audit said.

The audit also charged that the county lacks an adequate number of foster homes, due in part to "significant burn-out experienced by foster parents who have not been adequately trained to deal with seriously disturbed foster children."

As of July 1, 1985, San Bernardino County had a total of 481 licensed foster homes providing 1,213 beds, far fewer than are needed.

The caseloads of social workers are worst in the desert region. In the Yucca Valley area, for instance, cases of child molestation are up 300 percent.

Countywide, each of the 106 social workers handles about 44 cases each month.

The turnover rate for caseworkers was 21.5 percent in the 1984-85 fiscal year, the audit said.

To remedy the situation, the audit first recommends that the position of administrator of the Department of Public Social Services (DPSS) be made a full-time position rather than part-time, as currently is the case.

James Fare, as administrator of the DPSS, also oversees the CPPS agency. He estimated he spends about 75 percent of his 9-to-5 day working as the DPSS administrator and the other 25 percent working in his other capacity as administrator of the Human Resources Agency and the division of Veteran Affairs.

Fare refused comment on the audit until he can study the document more fully.

Second District County Supervisor Cal McElwain said that he plans on Monday to begin a reorganization that will allow the DPSS position to be one that is full-time. The position administers a budget of more than $22 million a year and oversees 1,272 employees, according to the audit.

The audit and the county grand jury also recommend that the county Board of Supervisors take corrective action to solve caseload and personnel problems.

"This corrective action is necessary to allow DPSS to carry out its responsibility to protect children from undue harm," the audit said.

If the county does not spend additional money to solve the problems, it could face even higher costs than the expenditures in the form of potentially significant lawsuits, the audit said.

The audit also suggests that Fare upgrade minimum qualifications for licensed social workers, many of whom rarely have training beyond a bachelor's degree level.

Foster parents should be selected "in accordance with the same criteria utilized in approving prospective adoptive parents," the audit suggested.

A Placement Quality Review Board should be created to make sure foster parents are qualified to take in abused children, the audit added.

Claremont man takes weather seriously

By Stephen O'Connor

Weather is no trivial matter to Gary London of Claremont.

The amateur meteorologist specializes in supplying local newspapers with weather trivia, "colorful and scientifically accurate material on the many facets of weather in the Southland," he said.

How much rain did Upland receive in January 1973? Ask London, he'll probably have the answer tucked away somewhere in his files.

His vocation may seem frivolous, but London is very serious about it. "It's my life," he said.

His list of accomplishments is a long one. He has served on forecast teams and undertaken serious research programs while a student at Citrus and Mt. San Antonio College.

Because of his long background in meteorology, he has qualified to work for the government in meteorological related areas.

"It's strange, some of the things that happen here. Like in January of 1966, we had a full-blown Santa Ana wind condition for two nights in a row. In places it (the wind) was blowing up to 90 mph. That is very, very rare," he said.

Things change here rapidly. In January of '78 following a very bad wind storm, a tornado hit San Dimas. Then, two months later, we got two inches of rain in 45 minutes. Southern California is a very active spot when it comes to the weather," said London.

There are times when London finds himself laughing out loud at TV weathermen. "There were a lot of times I knew they (TV Weathermen) were going to mess it up just by looking at my charts," said London. "It happens a lot."

Besides supplying the media with "weather trivia," London hopes to get into the more serious aspects of meteorology and land a job with the Federal Aviation Administration or the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. "Right now, I'm classified by the government as a meteorological technician," he said. "So I'm qualified to work for any of those agencies, but they give priority to (military) service personnel. For now, though, I'll try to make it independently," London said.

London said meteorology has interested him since he was little. "The power behind it; I look up and see it and want to know exactly what goes on up there. It's fascinating."

Valle Vista School children released 700 balloons to celebrate Day of the Teacher.

Valle Vista pupils celebrate teachers

Last week was Teacher Appreciation Week all across the nation, but Valle Vista School in Rancho Cucamonga chose to celebrate in an unusual fashion.

Wednesday, May 14 had been declared "Day of the Teacher" at most West Valley school districts.

All 615 Valle Vista students celebrated by marching onto the school playing field and forming the word "teacher." The students were grouped by class.

PTA members gave brief speeches, then 700 helium-filled balloons were released by the students and staff.

The teachers were treated to a salad bar luncheon at the end of the school day. Later that night, they returned to host a school open house.

Focus on avoiding food choking in children

"Prevent Food Choking in Young Children" will be a program offered by the Child and Adolescent Health Program clinics of the San Bernardino County Health Department during June and July.

Choking is the leading cause of accidental death in children younger than 1 year old, and the fourth leading cause of accidental deaths in children under the age of 5, according to county health department officials.

A death from food choking claims the life of one child every five days in the United States, health officials said.

Upon entering the clinic waiting room, parents will be able to view photo displays which illustrate tips on how to prevent food choking and explain why children choke. Parents may also receive a pamphlet reviewing the prevention tips which include:

- Cutting foods into small pieces.

- Removing bones, seeds and pits from foods.
- Not giving children hard, slippery, round foods.
- Not letting children run, play or talk with food in their mouths.

- Being sure children are sitting up to eat and are supervised by an adult.

Colorful posters will also display foods that commonly cause choking in young children. These foods include whole hot dogs and other meat sticks, popcorn, hard candy, nuts, raw carrots, gum, peanut butter and whole grapes. For infants, raw apples, teething biscuits and cookies should also be avoided.

The "Chew-Chew Express" train will be around to remind children to chew foods slowly.

The Child and Adolescent Health Program provides health evaluation for children and youth, from birth to age 21 on Medi-Cal with a current proof of eligibility sticker.

Children under 6 or between 10 and 18 years of age from low income families may receive these checkups free of charge.

The following clinics will be participating in the "Prevent Food Choking in Young Children" campaign:

- West Valley Health Center — 320 E. D St., Oxnard. Phone: 628-2914.

- Chino Health Center — 13260 Central Ave., Chino. Phone: 628-2914.

- Fontana Health Center — 17830 Arrow Blvd., Fontana.

"When we tried, we couldn't find out the phone number through information," Buller said. "It is one of those homes that looks like it's not owned by an individual."

Buller said code enforcement officer Joe Torrez sent four or five certified letters to the Costa Mesa address on the need to board up the house, but with no response.

"Citations have been written, but they kept coming back," Buller said.

So, on May 7 the building was boarded up by the city. A sign on the door reading, "danger: this building is unsafe for human occupancy," was posted, but was missing a few days later.

Cheryl Smith said she felt the city was trying to placate her by boarding up the house.

"They're placating me is what they're doing," Smith said, walking through the four-foot-high weeds in the glass-strewn yard around the house. "I don't believe, after all this time, they don't know who owns it and they can't do anything about it."

Buller said the city has contacted the county about cleaning up the weeds.

Buller claimed the city was already in the process of boarding up the house before The Daily Report started looking into the problem two weeks ago.

"I believe we've taken the necessary steps to abate this," Buller said. "All the city can do is try its best to make sure it doesn't become a nuisance. If that means constant enforcement in terms of trying to make sure it stays boarded up ... what we need is cooperation from the property owner. The messages are not getting through to the property owner."

"It's still a good house," he continued. "It could be fixed up and lived in. It's just been neglected."

During the rest of teacher appreciation week, teachers were given gifts.

On Monday, they received balloon bouquets and invitations to a continental breakfast held in their honor Tuesday morning.

Wednesday, each teacher received a "first-aid basket" that contained tissues, erasers, apples, candy, hats, aspirin, and rulers. (The first letter of each item spells "teacher.")

On Thursday, teachers were given red carnations, and on Friday, they were treated to sweets and pastries courtesy of the PTA.

Anyone who's ever wondered how many rabbits it takes to make an angora sweater should have been at the Rains House in Rancho Cucamonga last Saturday.

Rancho Days, one of two major annual fund-raising events at the historic former home of John Rains and Dona Merced, drew a crowd of children and adults who were curious to know how people performed day-to-day tasks around the turn of the century.

Pat Holbrook of Ontario was one of the many crafts demonstrators at the event.

"I have an 8-5 job to support my habit," she said. Her habit is spinning wool.

She has a herd of rabbits at home, and each one produces about one angora sweater a year out of the remnants from its weekly brushing.

Last year there were rabbits and sheep at Rancho Days, but this year, they stayed home.

"Any rabbit is sensitive to heat, which is why they aren't here," Holbrook said, twisting wisps of angora and feeding them into the spinning wheel with her fingers. "You can weave anything as long as it's got an inch or more (of length)."

In the kitchen of the 126-year-old house, Dorothy Schmidt worked over a table with her sleeves rolled up, kneading bread by hand. She made wheat bread, seven-grain bread, and white bread for visitors to sample, kneading each loaf for about ten minutes.

"I'm doing it the old-fashioned way, except I'm baking it in a convection oven," Schmidt said, patting a layer of flour over the mound of dough in her hands.

In one of the bedrooms, Elizabeth Serbell of Whittier sat at her 18-inch loom, weaving placemats in an old colonial pattern called "Log Cabin."

Weaving is the easy part, Serbell said. Setting up the loom is another matter. Serbell said it took her 4-5 hours to set up her 18-inch loom.

For larger looms, it can take a couple of days for all the preparations.

Serbell retired two years ago after teaching high school science for 25 years. Weaving was a way of working out her tensions, she said.

"You can get so wrapped up and absorbed in it that the various problems of the day just fade into the background," she said.

In the dining room, Adele Glasson of Alta Loma, president of the Embroiderers Guild of America, worked on a counted cross-stitch project, counting out stitches to embroider the "Lord's Prayer" onto a piece of cloth.

"It's deceptively easy, much, much easier than it looks," she said. "You can learn it in ten minutes."

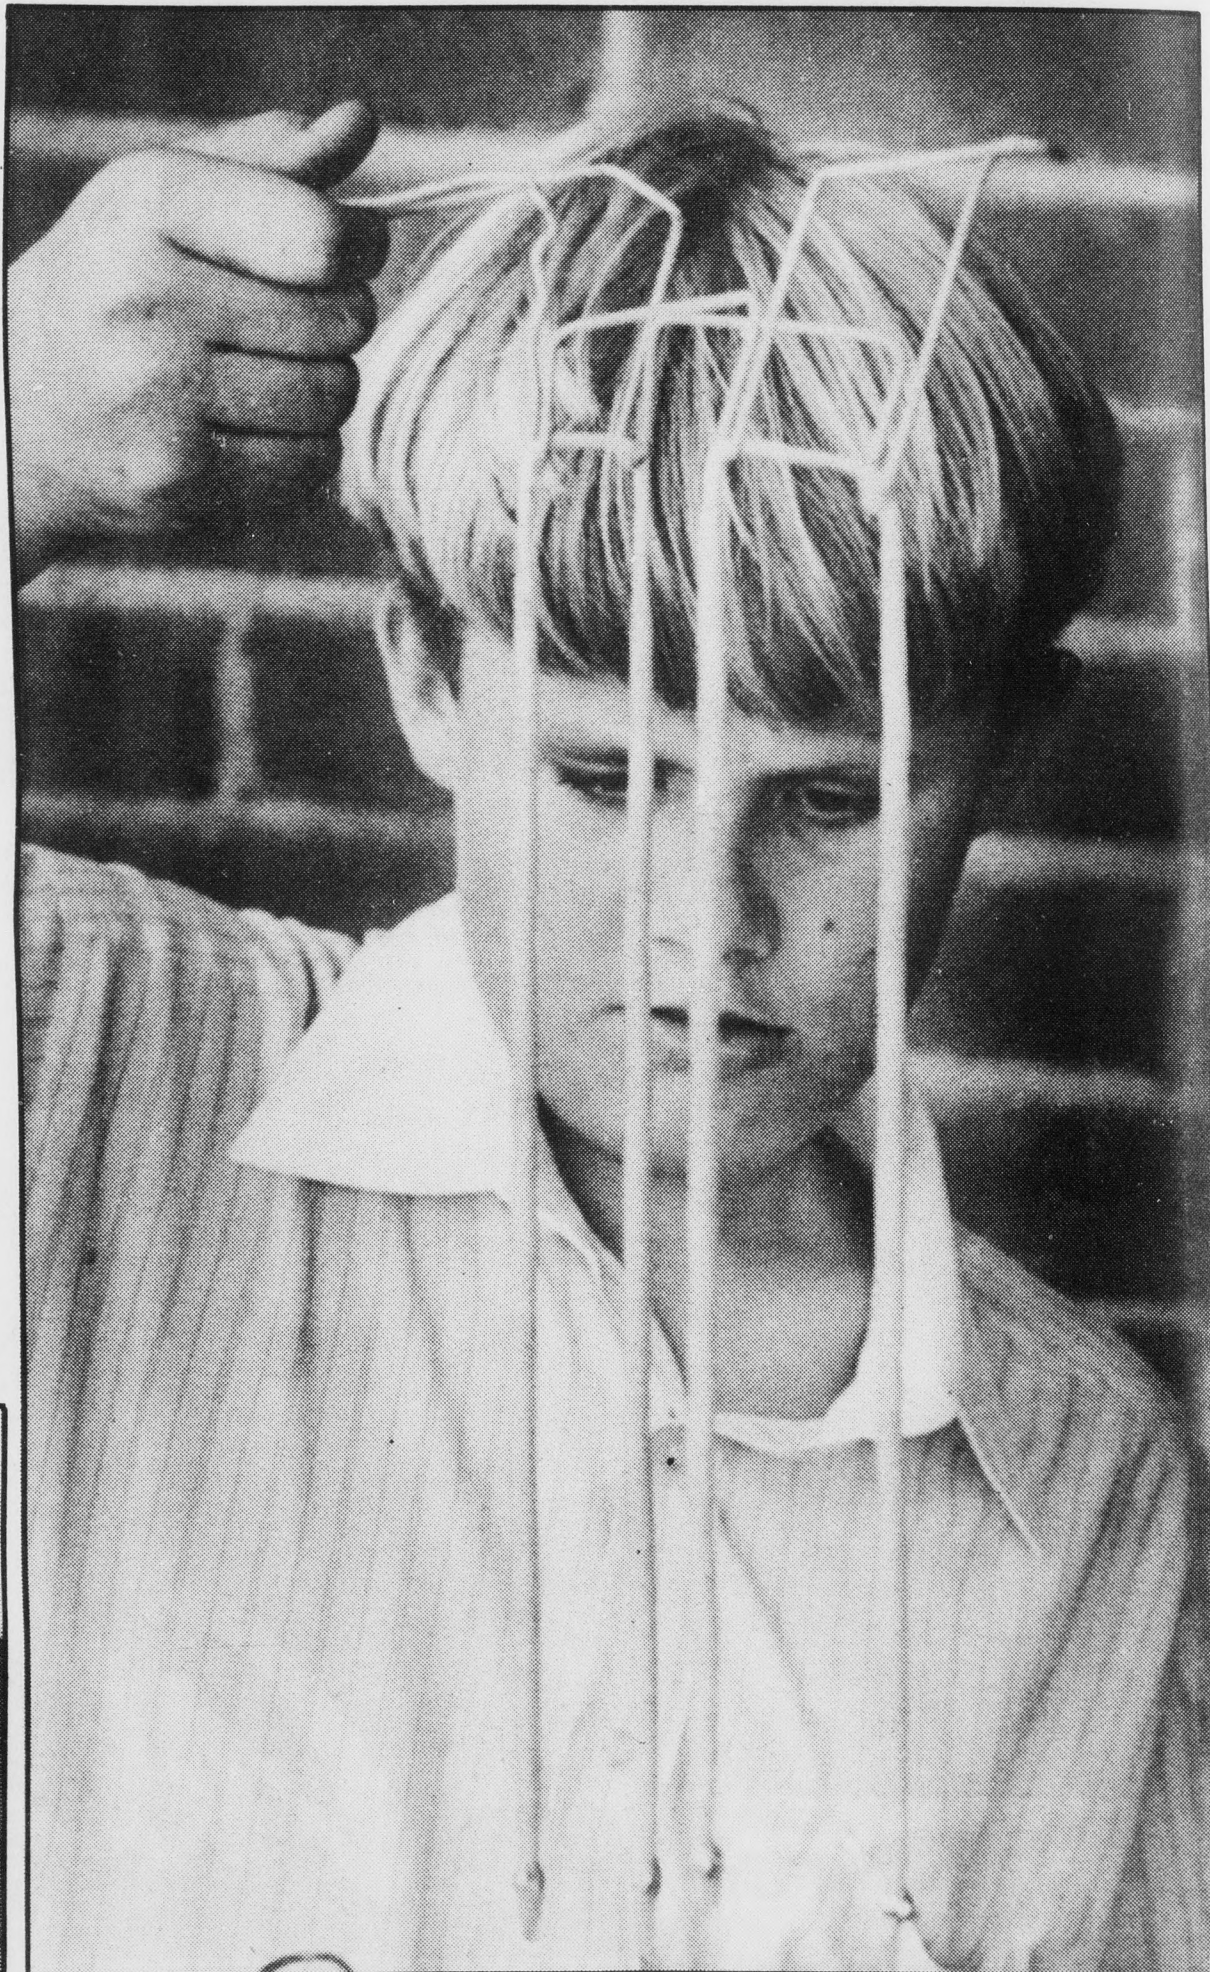

Outside the house, Bob Schmidt, principal of Jasper Elementary School and head of the Casa de Rancho Cucamonga Historical Society, demonstrated cattle branding on souvenir scraps of leather.

Nearby, Carrie Parisienne, caretaker of the Rains House, demonstrated candle making.

Visitors ate chili and tortillas on the lawn while listening to the music of The Phiddleharmonics, a band which performed in the afternoon. The Baldy Mountain Boys played bluegrass music in the morning.

Maxine Strane, curator of the Rains House, said $6,000-$7,000 will be needed to renovate the southern section of the kitchen and turn the other section into a museum with display cases and exhibits, the last major restoration project at the house.

The Rains House is a satellite of the San Bernardino County Museum.

ga Junior High School student, helps out with a candle-making demonstration.

Roadwork finished in Upland as Benson Avenue re-opens

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Upland residents who have been frustrated by the seemingly constant roadwork in the northwest part of the city can breathe a sigh of relief — and drive on new and better roads.

After two years of work and a few months of being closed, Benson Avenue was opened Monday north of 18th Street, according to Suzanne Hardt of the city engineering department.

It has been expanded to four lanes and takes a new curve into 21st Street. In addition, parts of 20th and 21st streets and Benson and Wilson avenues have been discontinued.

A new road, Stonecrest Avenue, sprouts out of Benson just south of 21st Street and winds north to join 23rd Street. Another road, Blair Avenue, is planned to connect Stonecrest and 23rd Street with 24th Street to the north, Hardt said.

To accommodate the new developments in the area, a storm drain along Benson was installed, as well as sewer and water lines throughout the project area, she said.

The city Redevelopment Agency installed curbs and gutters, street lights, traffic signs and pavement striping. Benson also will have a landscaped median island similar to that on Mountain Avenue. It will be completed later this year, Hardt said.

This work is part of the Canyon Ridge Redevelopment area, the city's first redevelopment project, which began in 1983.

Although the original cost estimate to the city was $4 million, according to City Engineer Fred Blanchard, the actual cost may be significantly lower. To date, the city has spent $2.5 million, with most of the work completed.

Blanchard said that sidewalks and bicycle paths will be added as property owners in the area build their housing developments. Some of those will be financed by the developers themselves, he said, but others will be paid for by the city in exchange for property donations made by the owners in order to build the roads.

Upland School District to hold summer school

The Upland School District will hold its annual summer school again this year for students looking for some fun and enrichment during their vacation.

Courses in computer science, mathematics, language arts, music and art will be offered at no charge from 8:20 a.m. to noon on weekdays.

The first session runs June 26 through July 10 and the second session runs July 11 through July 24.

Special education and remedial courses are also available.

A total of 18 classes each will be held at Upland Elementary, Upland Junior High, Pioneer Junior High and Magnolia schools for students presently in the 3rd through 7th grades.

People must register by June 13 by calling Lynn Esparcia at 946-3869.

Youths' art work goes on display

Some youthful renditions based on the styles of artists like Henri Matisse and Georgia O'Keeffe are on display at Saint Mark's Episcopal School through June 6.

The art show contains about 400 paintings, murals and other works by the school's 80 students in kindergarten through third grade, according to art teacher Mary Godby.

She said some of the pieces are based on the works of well-known artists in an effort to teach the children cultural heritage as well as artistic expression.

"We studied Georges Rouault during Lent when we concentrate on the cross and Christ's Passion," she explained. "We studied Georgia O'Keeffe during the Easter season when flowers are used so prominently in the church."

She said students also simulated Matisse's stained glass work by using his method of designing with paper cut-outs.

The students used a variety of paints — from oils to Craig Olson, director of Pioneer Junior High School's jazz band, leads members in practice for their upcoming performance at Expo '86 in Vancouver. The band will also be featured at the Playboy Jazz Festival in Hermosa Beach.

Pioneer's jazz band tunes up for June 1 appearance at Expo

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Seventeen members of Pioneer Junior High School's eighth grade class will be leaving on a good note this year.

Those Upland students, joined by two seventh graders, make up the school's award-winning jazz band, which will be making a trip to Vancouver to perform at Expo '86 on June 1.

The band was invited to perform last fall after sending in an audition tape, according to band director Craig Olson.

Playing a combination of experimental jazz as well as old big band-era standards, the young band has done extraordinarily well this year, placing first in six state and regional competitions. That makes it the number-one junior high jazz band in the state, Olson said.

"This band is the first I've ever had that has consistently placed first in all state competitions," he said.

But Olson, who has been directing the band since 1978, has had plenty of good bands. With the exception of the first year, his band has always placed within the top three of the competitions. This year's band has won his 50th award for the school, he said.

On May 26, the band will be featured along with the Hemet High School and two college bands at the Playboy Jazz Festival at Hermosa Beach. The concert will be broadcast live from 1-4 p.m. on radio station KKKO.

For its Expo performance, the band earned the $7,000 needed for its flight to Canada and other expenses on the three-day trip by playing for local service organizations, Olson said.

Stage one fire restrictions go into effect

San Bernardino National Forest Supervisor Richard L. Stauber has announced that stage one fire restrictions went into effect last Thursday.

Stage one fire restrictions are implemented at that time of year when there is warmer and drier weather.

Stage one fire restrictions prohibit smoking except within enclosed vehicles, developed recreational sites, such as campgrounds and picnic areas or within an area cleared to mineral soil at least three feet in diameter. Campfires are allowed only within developed campgrounds or at designated sites with a permit issued from the local ranger station.

Chemical stoves are allowed in unrestricted areas with a permit.

Anyone planning on visiting the San Bernardino National Forest should check with the local ranger station for local information and permits.

Local students enter county's writing festival

Fourteen students from the Cucamonga School District participated in the county's Writing Celebration.

In addition to the entries from first-through eighth-grade students, a group project by Pat Biehl's Guasti Kindergarten School class also was included.

The students' work was selected from schoolwide competitions. Here is a list of the Cucamonga students who participated in the county contest:

- Los Amigos School: Joshua Hathaway, Sarah Gomez, Amy Rector, Melanie Azipour, Jackie Velarde and Tishana Gibbs.

- Cucamonga Elementary School: Donald Reyes, Fred Hunt, Monique Magallanes, Tonya Berger, Michael Tomsen, Bonar Chiu.

- Rancho Middle School: Brian Wichert and Elizabeth Durant.

Record catch

Gregg Silks of Rancho Cucamonga holds the 41-pound, 1.5-ounce striped bass that he recently caught at Lake Silverwood, good enough for a state record for landlocked stripers. Silks, who works at Hawg's Bait and Tackle in Ontario, landed the big one after a 15-minute fight using a homemade four-ounce white lead jig on a 15-pound test line. Soon after landing the record, Silks also reeled in a 25-pounder.

Chaffey softball season successful

"It was a great season," said Chaffey College softball coach Cal Nikont. "It was a complete turnaround from a year ago."

"Now they know we can play softball at Chaffey College."

The Panthers ended their season by dropping two games at the Southern California regional playoffs. After winning the opening contest, Chaffey was eliminated following losses to Rancho Santiago (2-0) and Pasadena (3-1).

Nikont's Panthers, which won the Inland Valley Conference title, posted a 23-9 seasonal mark. In his first year at the Chaffey helm, Nikont was 2-22.

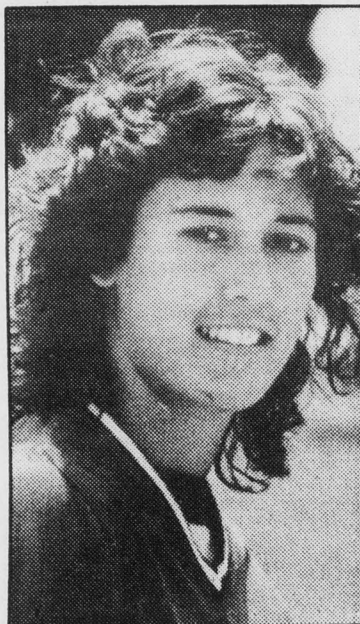

Pitcher Celeste Heathcock and catcher Jackie Taylor were also selected to the all-Southern California team, as chosen by community college coaches. Additionally, Jenny Biallas was tabbed to the all-tournament team in action at Huntington Beach.

Biallas batted .400 in the tournament and stole five bases without being caught. The Panther freshman stole 38 bases this season without being caught.

"This team was really talented, had a lot of ability," said Nikont. "There was a different feeling between this team and the one last year. These girls know they're good, and they expect to win."

A year ago Nikont went out and recruited an excellent freshman class. He'll return everyone in the lineup next year with the exception of Taylor, a sophomore catcher.

Jenny Biallas

Winning has made his recruiting tasks much easier.

Biallas, Taylor and Tracy Medina each had two hits in Chaffey's opening 5-3 win.

Merandi selected as East grid assistant

Pete Merandi, head football coach at Upland High School, has been selected to assist Bob Baiz in the annual Hall of Fame football game set for Aug. 8 at Arroyo High School.

Baiz, head football coach at Claremont, is the East squad head man. In addition to Merandi, Biaz will be assisted by Tom Carroll of Damien, Glenn Killingsworth of Chaffey High School plus Claremont assistants Don Warhurst, Jack Harper, Rick Dutton and Fred Akman.

Region 32

at 6 p.m.

A fee of $35 will be charged to the first child, $30 for the second and $25 for the third. There is a $90 minimum per family.

Uniforms and pictures are included in the price. A $15 late registration fee will be assessed for signups after June 14.

Rancho PW

Football players and cheerleaders between the ages of 7½ and 14 years of age can participate in Rancho Cucamonga Pop Warner's six team next fall.

Participants must live within the city and produce a birth certificate at registration. There are weight requirements for boys to determine the right team, but cheerleaders have no such requirements.

Further information may be obtained by calling 945-2512.

Upland holds off passing adult ordinance

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Upland will go without a permanent adult entertainment ordinance a little longer, the City Council decided Monday night.

The proposed law, which restricts the locations of the businesses and requires that doors be removed from on-site video viewing booths, was scheduled for its final reading Monday.

However, in light of threatened litigation from the attorney representing the city's only adult business, City Attorney Don Maroney suggested that the matter be put off for more study.

Although T&A Video, the adult business at 2121 W. Foothill Blvd., is in a location allowed by the ordinance, it would have to remove the doors to its video viewing booths upon approval.

If the ordinance was put in place and then taken to court, Maroney said, the city must have evidence showing, among other things, that keeping the doors on the booths can be a public health threat.

Because of a recent federal

Supreme Court ruling, Upland can use evidence from the experiences of other cities, Maroney said. But he added that he wanted to get more details from cities like Ontario, which already has a similar booth ordinance, before his ordinance is signed into law.

Maroney also told the council that the city attorney and city planner of Whittier are being sued, personally, for "improper motives" because of comments made against the Pussycat Theater during the institution of an adult entertainment law there.

While a temporary ordinance barring any new adult businesses from entering the city remains in place, the proposed permanent law will go back to the Planning Commission.

That is just where T&A Video attorney Roger Diamond wanted it.

Diamond and the store's owner, Waldon Randall Welty, had objected to the fact that they were not notified of the first commission hearing on the law. Although Planning Director Bill Young said notification is not required by law, Diamond said they should have been notified because the ordinance is aimed at his client's business.

He said he might challenge the city's new ordinance in court on that basis.

"Send the owner of T&A notice of the Planning Commission hearing so it's on the books," Councilman Frank Carpenter told planning staff. "Even if it was covered last time."

Maroney agreed.

"We're going to try to notify everyone in the world," he said jokingly.

When told of the council's decision, Diamond — who was not present at the meeting — said the council had done "the right thing."

He said he would attend the meeting "assuming it's held at a time I can make it."

Diamond said that he did not attend the first council hearing on the ordinance because owner Welty was there only to make the point that the discussion was irrelevant at the council level.

After protesting that he was not notified of the commission hearing, Welty left immediately, seemingly offending some of the council members.

Each grade worked on a group mural, Godby said. In addition, all grades worked on the "Tree of Life," which changed with the seasons, from crepe paper flowers to papier-mache fruit.

"H.O.T. TIPS" (HOUSE OF TOOLS)

The use of steel wool to smooth wood finishes can leave particles in moldings and joints that are difficult to remove. Superior results can be obtained by using air conditioner or furnace filter material which is available from plumbing supply and some hardware stores. It is available in several grades of abrasiveness, does not shed material, and since each piece lasts a long time, is very economical.

When nailing small brads, it's often difficult to hold them between your fingers, especially in tight quarters. Next time, try using a small bar magnet to hold it for you. Once started, the magnet can be removed and the nail driven home.

An easy way to get a non-slip surface on your miter gauge is to glue a piece of 220 grit sandpaper to it using disc adhesive. When you need to remove or replace the sandpaper, just peel the paper off and clean the gauge with solvent.

Reorganization of EPWA made by Supervisors

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — With the head of the Environmental Public Works Agency retiring, the county Board of Supervisors Monday approved a major reorganization of the agency.

Eight positions were eliminated, including the deputy administrator's for an annual salary savings of $447,643. Approximately $280,135 of the savings will be used to offset the anticipated cost of allowing administrators who chose to retire early an additional two years of service credit.

By Monday's deadline for accepting the early retirement offer, announcements of retirement have been made by eight county administrators, including EPWA Administrator Jack Peddy.

Other administrators retiring, their positions and years of service are Joe Czvik, the assistant personnel director, 33 years; Bob Clinton, communications director, 32 years; Don Meyers, chief deputy sheriff, 32 years; Robert Graham, chief deputy recorder, 21 years; Esther Perchan, administrative assistant to the board of supervisors, 20 years; Glen King, administrative analyst, 13 years; and Robert Davis, building and maintenance construction manager, 19 years.

Needles Justice Court Judge Jack Massey has also applied for early retirement, according to Harry Mays, the county's personnel director.

The EPWA reorganization eliminates three deputy administrator positions, those for public works, support services and development services. In addition three secretary positions and two administrative analysts were eliminated.

All of the people in the EPWA positions will be transferred to other jobs, Mays said.

The county board was able to eliminate the eight EPWA positions by taking from the agency the Housing and Community Development Department, Energy Resource Management division and Affordable Housing functions and placing them under a new department to be called the Office of Infrastructure.

"The result of these transfers is a reduced span of control for the EPWA administrator which would no longer necessitate the Deputy Administrator level," wrote Mays in a report to the board.

The new Office of Infrastructure was authorized by the board four months ago to coordinate the provision of streets, schools, water and sewer services and other needs to developing areas. Its administrator will be hired using an unused administrative position in the office of the County Administrative Officer, so no additional cost will have to be budgeted, according to CAO Robert Rigney.

Meanwhile, 2nd District Supervisor Cal McElwain said he chose Monday to wait until a future meeting to bring up his proposal to reorganize the Department of Public Social Services as well in order to make the head of that department a full-time, rather than a part-time position as recommended last week by the county Grand Jury.

Upland Elementary teacher is honored

Upland Elementary special education teacher Pauline Lindblad was honored last week for her more than 30 years of teaching children with mental handicaps.

The California Association for Neurologically Handicapped Children, an Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities, presented Lindblad with a gift certificate for classroom supplies at the Upland School District board meeting.

CANHC-CALD recognizes the patience and dedication of those who teach children with learning disabilities, said the group's secretary, Sharon Rehart.

"Most of her children don't get on the honor roll and most of her children don't get good grades," Rehart said, adding that Lindblad was a "teacher who recognizes a learning disabled child does learn, but he learns differently."

Lindblad, who is about to retire, thanked the district "for paying me to do the things I love to do."

No sale date may be set until three months from the date this notice of default may be recorded (which date of recordation appears on this notice). This amount is $2,815.40 as of May 11, 1986, and will increase until your account becomes current.

You may not have to pay the entire unpaid portion of your account even though full payment was demanded, but you must pay the amount stated above. However, you and your beneficiary or mortgagee may mutually agree in writing prior to the time the notice of sale is posted (which may not be earlier than the end of the three-month period stated above) to, among other things, (1) provide additional time in which to cure the default by transfer of the property or otherwise; or (2) establish a schedule of payments in order to cure your default; or both (1) and (2).

Following the expiration of the time period referred to in the first paragraph of this notice, unless the obligation being foreclosed upon or a separate written agreement between you and your creditor permits a longer period, you have only the legal right to stop the sale of your property by paying the entire amount demanded by your creditor.

To find out the amount you must pay, or to arrange for payment to stop the foreclosure, or if your property is in foreclosure for any other reason, contact: Jennifer Seplak, Citicorp Savings, 180 Grand Avenue, 5th Floor, Oakland, CA 94604, (415) 891-8600.

If you have any questions, you should contact a lawyer or the government agency which may have insured your loan. Notwithstanding the fact that your property is in foreclosure, you may clear your property for sale, provided the sale is concluded prior to the conclusion of the foreclosure. Remember, YOU MAY LOSE LEGAL RIGHTS IF YOU DO NOT TAKE PROMPT ACTION.

In addition to the amount stated above, should any prior taxes, liens, or encumbrances be delinquent or become delinquent, and the loan can be reinstated, said delinquencies must be cured as a condition of reinstatement.

Check out requirements for veterinary school

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.
Copley News Service

Q. I am seriously considering becoming a veterinarian. How long does it take? Do veterinarians specialize like medical doctors do?

How many veterinary schools are there in the United States? I have heard that it is extremely difficult to get into a veterinary school.

A. There currently are 27 veterinary medical colleges in the United States. There are two located in Alabama and one in each of the following states: California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin.

The combined student enrollment in the veterinary degree programs of the U.S. veterinary medical colleges for the academic year 1985-86 is 8,863 of which 4,357 (49.2 percent) are males and 4,506 (50.8) percent are females. The first-year class of U.S. veterinary medical colleges has 2,280 students, of which 44.6 percent are males and 55.4 percent are females. Approximately 46 percent of all qualified applicants were accepted in the 1985 first-year class. In other words, there were approximately two qualified applicants for every veterinary student position in 1985.

Most U.S. veterinary schools have four-year curriculums. In addition to the four years of veterinary school, two to four years of pre-veterinary study are required. Many students obtain bachelor degrees or master of science degrees prior to beginning veterinary school.

Many veterinarians do specialize after going to veterinary school. The American Veterinary Medical Association recognizes the following 14 specialty boards: anesthesiology, dermatology, internal medicine, laboratory animal medicine, microbiology, ophthalmology, pathology, practitioners, preventive medicine, radiology, surgery, theriogenology (reproduction), toxicology and zoological medicine. To become board certified in any of these specialty areas, a veterinarian must spend additional time in study and pass rigorous written and practical examinations. Currently, there are approximately 3,000 veterinarians with board certification.

There are approximately 40,000 veterinarians in the United States. If your state of residence has a veterinary school, you should write to the dean of admissions for the requirements for admittance. If your state does not have a veterinary school, you should write to the schools of your choice to inquire if they accept students from your state.

Because there are many pre-veterinary requirements, obtain the list of requirements early in your college career so that you can plan wisely. Most veterinary schools recommend that applicants have some experience working with a veterinarian prior to application. This experience helps the candidate evaluate his or her suitability for the profession.

insurance industry and suggest underwriters cultivated the crisis hoping to cury public support for reforms in liability law.

But industry representatives say it was just a matter of time before a deluge of multimillion-dollar judgments sent premiums skyward.

Recent reports have dismissed both the purported litigation explosion and a dramatic jump in the size of jury awards as fiction perpetrated by the insurance industry.

Both sides, however, have been able to produce little hard evidence to support their cases.

"Despite anecdotal evidence," Van de Kamp said earlier this year, "there is no statistical evidence that the change in the rule of joint and several liability ... would substantially minimize" public agencies' exposure.

Van de Kamp said the initiative fails to address insurance industry mismanagement and attorneys' contingency fees, both of which he said "deserve scrutiny."

The initiative, Van de Kamp concluded, "will yield neither lower insurance rates nor improved coverage ... Instead, it will enrich insurance companies at the expense of victims and weaken incentives for toxic polluters and others engaged in hazardous activities to obey the law."

The Proposition 51 campaign has relied heavily on a blanket of support from cities and counties, while drawing additional backing from popular state schools Superintendent Bill Honig, law enforcement and a host of business associations, including the California Manufacturers Association and state Chamber of Commerce.

At least 59 cities, unable to obtain liability coverage, are operating without insurance, according to the League of California Cities. Another 160 have formed self-insurance pools.

"The reason cities and counties are uninsurable is joint and several liability, pure and simple," said D. Michael Enfield, managing director of Marsh & McLennan, a San Francisco insurance brokerage that claims to be the world's largest. "The deep pocket doctrine has made the risk unacceptable ... because risk can't even be calculated."

California remains the only state in which "insurers regard cities and counties as totally uninsurable," said Moore of the pro-51 campaign.

A voluntary sampling that included 80 percent of the state's 441 cities, the survey indicated, however, that deep-pockets judgments and settlements have steadily declined, from $18.4 million in 1982-83 to $16.9 million in 1984-85.

"What we see is our municipal officials being herded in front of the insurance industry as their shock troops to fool the voters," said James Wheaton, a San Diego public interest attorney and chairman of the anti-51 campaign.

In addition to depriving victims of just compensation, opponents say narrowing the joint and several liability doctrine could produce even more victims by reducing the economic incentive for corporate America to insure the safety of its products.

Whatever happens on June 3, no one is promising lower insurance rates as a result of the initiative. Some fear passage without rate relief could spawn a consumer revolt reminiscent of the rent control movement of the late 1970s.

"Proposition 51 isn't going to do it all," said state Sen. John Seymour, R-Anaheim. "... I'm concerned that if Proposition 51 passes, we could get a backlash similar to what we saw with Proposition 13 ... Tenants were going to get their rents cut because landlords were going to save all that money. Well, baloney. It didn't happen."

Republican voters narrow gap on Democrats

By Don Green

Voter registration for the June primary in San Bernardino County is noticeably lower than the record set for the 1984 presidential election, but Republicans continued to narrow the gap with Democrats.

Figures were released last week on the registration totals as of May 5, the deadline to sign up to vote in the primary. Overall, 453,821 voters are registered in the county.

That number will increase by some 2,500 under urgency legislation signed by Gov.

George Deukmejian. The bill makes registrations valid when voters omitted such information as their middle initials and occupations.

Registration historically drops from the year of a presidential election to the next even-numbered year of non-presidential elections.

For the November 1984 general election, county registration was 482,811, or 6.4 percent higher than the current total. Still, registration is 22.3 percent greater than for the last comparable election, the June 1982 gubernatorial primary.

Selective purges of voters who have moved or died help account for the decrease in registration since 1984.

Registrar of Voters Gerane Jacobsen has pointed out that neither major party mounted a major registration drive before the primary.

Both Democratic and Republican figures have fallen, but the GOP total has taken less of a tumble. The county has 210,594 Democrats and 195,310 Republicans.

Democrats account for 46.4 percent of the voters and Republicans 43 percent. The margin of 3.4 percent is the narrowest in memory.

During the party's registration surge in 1984, Republicans closed the gap from 10.7 percent in June to 5.7 percent in November. In June 1982, the margin was 11.6 percent.

In the only local legislative district likely to be a top Republican target in November, Rep. George Brown's Democratic advantage in registration has continued to shrink.

Figures from San Bernardino and Riverside counties show the 36th District as 55.2 percent Democratic and 34.6 percent Republican. The gap of 20.6 percent compares to 24.2 percent for the 1984 general election and 28.2 percent two years earlier.

The 66th Assembly District, where Democrat Gerald Eaves of Rialto is seeking re-election, remains strongly Democratic. Democrats account for 59 percent of the voters and Republicans 31 percent.

Other local legislative districts overlap into Los Angeles County, and figures from its 29-day close of registration were not yet available Wednesday.

In the 2nd Supervisorial District — where Rancho Cucamonga Councilman Jon Mikels and S.T. "Doc" Brannon of Phelan are challenging county Supervisor Cal McElwain — registration totals 92,621.

In the 4th District, where Supervisor Gus Skropos faces Chino Mayor Larry Walker, there are 77,320 registered voters.

Both races are non-partisan, but the split between Democrats and Republicans is remarkably similar in each district.

Democrats make up 43.7 percent in the 2nd and 45.2 percent in the 4th. Republicans are 45.7 percent in the 2nd and 44.9 percent in the 4th.

Registration figures are subject to slight changes with the addition to voting rolls under the bill signed Wednesday. For local cities, the totals were:

● Chino: 15,860 registered voters, Democrats 43.6 percent, Republicans 47.3 percent.

● Fontana: 19,290, Democrats 56 percent, Republicans 32.9 percent.

● Montclair: 9,793, 48.9 percent, Republicans 40.1 percent.

● Ontario: 39,817, Democrats 47.2 percent, Republicans 42.9 percent.

● Rancho Cucamonga: 29,150, Democrats 38.4 percent, Republicans 50.7 percent.

● Upland: 26,229, Democrats 35.9 percent, Republicans 54.4 percent.

Furniture availability keys transfer of Superior Courts

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — County administrators pledged last Thursday to try to solve problems with furniture orders for the Foothill Law and Justice Center so that the Superior Courts can move to the Rancho Cucamonga facility from Ontario during the week of Sept. 22.

If the courts begin operating in the Foothill courthouse in September, it will be exactly one year from the originally proposed start-up date of September 1985.

The new tentative move-in date was proposed in a meeting Thursday by the county's Superior Court Presiding Judge, Kenneth Ziebarth, who was concerned that a previously proposed July move-in was jeopardized by the fact that key furniture for the $38.9 million courthouse had not been ordered yet.

"The Superior Court proposed the tentative date subject to the various problems being resolved," said David Baker, the superior court's executive officer.

"The meeting was spent reviewing various problems involving furniture shipments," Baker said. "Not all of the questions were answered."

The possibility that the Foothill courthouse's opening may be delayed beyond September was not ruled out by Baker.

The key furnishings not yet ordered include shelves for the judges' and courthouse's law libraries, which must be in place before the courts can begin operating in the four-story building off Haven Avenue.

Other important furniture not yet ordered, according to Ziebarth, includes courtroom counsel tables, witness conference room tables and the furniture for entire areas including data processing, court reporter and basement offices.

The furniture for the Family Court Services also still needs to be ordered.

Ziebarth outlined the problems in a letter to the county Board of Supervisors.

The lack of furniture is just one of many problems that have delayed the opening of the Foothill center for a year.

Several months of delays were due to the need to redo the woodwork in the courtrooms because the original designs created line-of-sight problems for the judge's bench, bailiff's chair and witness stand.

Political consultants use creativity in Panama

By Benjamin Shore
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Direct-mail advertising in a presidential campaign in Panama has not been a common tactic, and for good reason: most Panamanians don't have street addresses.

San Diego-based political consultant George Gorton didn't know this when he won a contract to mount a direct-mail operation for presidential candidate Nicolas Ardito Barletta in 1984.

"We had to get creative," Gorton recalled.

With computers spewing out personalized letters to voters, which is a typical American campaign tactic, Gorton said he had to organize a volunteer force of 32,000 workers to augment the nation's 21 letter carriers.

They then followed the electric meter readers on their rounds to locate citizens on the list of registered voters.

The political impact, Gorton said in an interview, was substantial among citizens who, in many cases, had never received a letter in their lives.

Barletta won, and post-election analyses showed that he did best in the rural areas where Gorton's letters had the most effect.

"It was the most startling thing that's happened in Latin American politics, and it probably will set a trend," Gorton contended.

An unmistakable trend has been developing in Europe and Latin America in the hiring of American political consultants, who have an international reputation for knowing how to manipulate voters' sentiments.

It is a lucrative business, with some Latin American campaigns paying what one consultant said was "over seven figures plus expenses" for slick radio and television commercials, sophisticated polling and analysis, targeting of key precincts, fund-raising, get-out-the-vote drives, and other staples of American campaigns.

"We're more knowledgeable because we do campaigns more frequently," said longtime consultant Joseph Napolitan, who once worked chiefly for liberal Democrats in the United States.

But during the past decade, Napolitan has turned almost exclusively to foreign work, with clients in Venezuela, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico, France, Mauritius and other countries.

In most foreign countries, the lower frequency of elections makes it difficult for local campaign specialists to develop similar skills, Napolitan said.

Foreign elections often are dominated by parties, with the candidate at the top of the ticket battling for a party sweep of all offices from president down to municipal posts.

American campaign specialists generally are hired by the parties, which themselves often have campaign tacticians who are learning from the Americans. Some are now being loaned to parties of the same ideology in other countries.

Napolitan, one of the most active American consultants abroad, speaks only English but finds no language barrier. He hires local linguists to do the translating.

"The only difference between a television commercial in the U.S. and Venezuela is that one's in Spanish," he said.

Consultant John Deardourff, who has worked in Venezuela, Spain and West Germany, is concerned that in Latin America, slick American campaign techniques might not be best for some countries where democracy is just beginning to take root.

"When you make this very rapid leap, from a situation where the people have no voice in government to free elections where media dominate, you've eliminated the development of effective grass roots political structures which give stability to political activity," Deardourff said.

"Democracy in some of these countries is very fragile."

Deardourff, who in the United States assists Republican candidates, has worked in countries where "you have television in villages where 90 percent of the population is illiterate ...

Also, he said, "You're dealing with politicians very new to the (democratic) process."

Dictators have little need to hire foreign consultants. It was only the challenge of a closely watched election last February that persuaded former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos to hire some American advisers on manipulating the media in his campaign against Corazon Aquino, who had American advisers of her own.

The firm of Black, Manafort, Stone and Atwater reportedly helped Marcos, especially with interviews on American television networks. Charles Black, Paul Manafort, Roger Stone and Lee Atwater all are veterans of President Reagan's presidential campaigns.

But a spokesman for the firm last week denied helping Marcos, insisting that the firm's work was limited to a public relations contract with the Chamber of Philippine Manufacturers, Exporters and Tourism Associations.

Political consultant David Sawyer had two of his specialists hired by the Aquino campaign, according to other consultants. Neither Sawyer nor his chief of international operations, Joel McCleary, was available for comment.

American campaign experts find themselves in demand almost exclusively for free elections, both in countries such as in Europe where democracy is well-rooted and those where it is a new political and social phenomenon.

In some of these countries, a common problem for the Americans is their clients' fear that public awareness of their involvement could be politically damaging.

"Because of strong nationalistic feelings in Latin American countries, if you're taking advice from a foreigner, that can be used against you," said consultant Sergio Bendixen.

"It would be a terrible problem in Argentina, which has strong anti-American feelings, and in Mexico."

In addition to extensive campaign work in Costa Rica, Bendixen has been hired by the Spanish International Network to do election polling and projections in Peru, Honduras, Guatemala, El Salvador and Colombia.

Bendixen was hired by Oscar Arias Sanchez, the 44-year-old lawyer and Boston University graduate who won Costa Rica's presidential election in February. Bendixen did all of his campaign planning, organized the campaign structure, advised on strategy and did the polling.

"He came to the U.S. looking for someone to hire, and I was recommended," said Bendixen, a native of Peru who speaks Spanish.

Bendixen, who works for liberal Democrats in the United States, managed California Sen. Alan Cranston's campaign for the democratic presidential nomination in 1984.

While most American consultants say it is not necessary to speak the language of their foreign clients, Bendixen says English-only consultants are at a "clear disadvantage."

Knowing the language "helps you get a feel for the political situation when you arrive by watching TV, reading newspapers, talking to people," he said.

"Also, people you work with feel more comfortable if they are able to express themselves in their own language."

Bendixen also agrees with Deardourff that American campaign tactics can be harmful to burgeoning democratic movements in some countries.

"In some countries that are just beginning the democratic experience, it probably is not healthy to be getting away from (party) politics and into technical things," he said.

Interest in American consultants is not limited to Europe and Latin America.

Consultant Raymond Strother, who developed the television commercials for Colorado Sen. Gary Hart's 1984 presidential campaign, said he was recently visited by officials of Canada's Liberal Party, which may be hiring an American consultant in the future. He also plans to visit

Coins strung on thread

The term "one-string money" refers to Chinese coins and dates back at least to the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644) when "one string" meant a collection of 1,000 "cash" coins strung on a thread. A "cash" was a copper-alloy coin with a square perforation in the center.

New Zealand after the November elections in the United States for similar discussions with Liberal Party leaders.

A constant rumor among consultants is that the Central Intelligence Agency or the U.S. State Department often recommends to foreign candidates favored by the United States that they hire certain American consultants to increase their chances of winning.

But the consultants say they would never know if the CIA or local U.S. embassy recommended them, or if their fees have been paid from covert U.S. funds.

Some consultants say they have been attracted to a client primarily because of his country's culture and climate.

Napolitan said he took on the 1982 re-election campaign of the ailing 82-year-old prime minister of Mauritius, an Indian Ocean island of 1 million residents off the east coast of Africa, mostly because of its Hawaii-like climate and resort atmosphere.

His candidate's opponent in the election, which would be decided in the parliament, was a young, articulate, charismatic man in a nation of youthful voters.

What kind of strategy did Napolitan devise for his client? "Survival!" Napolitan recalled with a laugh.

The prime minister lost, 60 to 0.

Popularity has run mantel clock price up

By James G. McCollam
Copley News Service

Q. Anything you can tell me about my Ansonia mantel clock will be appreciated. It is all metal and looks like pewter. It was made by Ansonia and is in excellent condition.

A. Your Ansonia clock was made of spelter or white metal. In some cases this was plated with brass. It is the "Knight" model and was manufactured in the 1880s. Popularity with collectors has run the price up to more than $500.

Q. I have a beautiful porcelain vase. It is cobalt blue with hand-painted panels of men and women in romantic poses. It is embellished with what appears to be gold leaf. The height is 14 inches. The mark on the bottom is attached. Can you tell me anything about it?

A. The mark you provided is that first used by Sevres (Royal Manufactory of Sevres, France), from 1738 to 1752. It also is the mark most commonly used by imitators.

If it is authentic, the value would be worth well more than $5,000. I suggest you take this to the local museum for authentication.

Q. My son has developed an interest in magic and now thinks he would like to collect old items relating to magic. Is this a recognized field of collectibles and is it an expensive hobby?

A. Yes this is a recognized hobby, and relatively inexpensive as the following will illustrate:

Deland's automatic playing cards — $8.

Ball and tube — $10.

Ball and vase — $10.

Ball through brass bolt — $30.

Cigarette case (vanishing cigarettes) — $25.

Cup and ball — $75.

Nest of silver boxes — $75.

Nickels to dimes — $15.

Burning globe — $160.

Morison ball vase — $125.

Okito coin box — $40.

Quarter (heads both sides) — $3.

Multiplying billiard balls — $35.

Dancing cane — $20.

Vanishing doll — $55.

Dove pan — $55.

Much-debated Proposition 51 grabs spotlight

By James P. Sweeney
Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — Wrapped in horror stories of windfall court awards, canceled insurance policies and gleeful toxic polluters, Proposition 51 involves a relatively simple alteration to a complex, centuries-old legal doctrine.

The potential consequences of that revision, however, have fueled a spirited, multimillion-dollar debate unparalleled among the other 10 propositions on the June 3 ballot.

Critics — trial lawyers, victims' rights groups and consumer advocates, including reigning corporate nemesis Ralph Nader — contend a venerable right of innocent victims to collect full compensation for their injuries is at stake.

In support, an alliance of insurance companies, doctors, local governments, and businesses say the measure offers simply a long overdue reform of a patently unfair law that has rendered them victims of a storm of unwarranted litigation.

The campaign, an extension of a national movement to tighten liability laws and curb legal awards, has pitted against each other two of the state's wealthiest and most despised special interests, the insurance industry and trial lawyers.

Each points a collective finger at the other when asked who's responsible for what has become the campaign's rallying point, an insurance crisis that has left cities, park districts, merchants, child-care centers

Nader makes attack on Prop. 51

By Robert Knowles
Copley News Service

CULVER CITY — America's consumer hero, Ralph Nader, made a not-unexpected attack on Prop. 51 Friday, calling it the product of a "multimillion-dollar disinformation campaign designed to mislead the voters of California ... into restricting the rights of the injured to have their day in court."

Ironically, the consumer crusader held his press conference in a Los Angeles County suburb which cannot afford liability coverage because of soaring insurance rates — a situation which has led most of the state's mayors and county supervisors to endorse Prop. 51.

The only prominent officials opposing Prop. 51 are Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and state Attorney General John Van de Kamp, both of whom agree with Nader that toxic polluters could end up benefiting from the measure.

Prop. 51 would end the practice of forcing public agencies to pick up all the pain and suffering liability damages when they are named as minor parties to a lawsuit and the major defendant has no coverage.

Typically, such cases involve uninsured drunk drivers who cause accidents on poorly lit city streets. Prop. 51 still would leave public agencies liable to pick up all the costs of medical bills or lost wages but no more than their fair share of pain and suffering damages.

Nader said Culver City and other cities are the victims of a liability coverage crisis "manufactured" by the insurance industry and toxic waste polluters to escape paying large damage judgments awarded by juries.

By limiting the pain and suffering payments to the exact percentage of fault attributed by the courts to each defendant in an accident lawsuit, Nader said Prop. 51 would "create an impossible burden of proof" for the injured.

This would be particularly difficult in chemical pollution cases, where victims would have to establish exactly what waste product caused percentage of a birth defect or a cancer.

"The only way to solve the insurance crisis is to reform the insurance industry and hold the perpetrators of harm accountable to citizens," he added.

Nader claimed the insurance industry has "blackmailed" public officials into endorsing Prop. 51 by raising liability premiums and/or canceling such coverage "without any actuarial justification to astronomical levels and by boycotting certain businesses and service providers."

According to figures compiled by the League of California Cities, so-called "deep pocket" lawsuits have cost taxpayers at least $75.4 million in lawsuits where public agencies were 5 percent to 10 percent at fault.

Nader insisted that no ballot measure should be approved by voters until the insurance industry is forced to open its books to legislative scrutiny.

Meanwhile, at the same time Nader was speaking, a state Assembly Republican Task Force on insurance was taking testimony in the Los Angeles County Hall of Administration from public officials supporting Prop. 51.

Lancaster Mayor Fred Hahn said his tiny, 60,000-population city was insurance "bare" after the coverage was canceled despite very few claims. Just before the cancellation, he added, deductibles were raised from $2,500 to $50,000.

pain and suffering. Liability for such damages would be limited to each defendant's percentage of responsibility.

Deep pockets defendants still could be forced to pay all of actual damages, such as lost wages and medical expenses.

"As a general rule of thumb," said Brad Moore of the Proposition 51 campaign, "non-economic damages are usually two to three times as much as actual damages."

But Attorney General John Van de Kamp, a Democrat and one of the initiative's most prominent opponents, said some of the largest judgments represent lost anticipated earnings and soaring medical costs.

With legal costs and attorneys' fees coming off the top, critics say seriously injured victims could be left without enough money to pay even medical bills. Many, they warn, would be forced onto welfare rolls.

Proposition 51 represents the first attempt to accomplish through the initiative process what critics of the deep pockets law could not secure from the Legislature.

Efforts to reform the law actually began in 1979, with legislation carried by state Sen. Robert Beverly, R-Redondo Beach. That bill and three others passed the Senate, only to be killed in the Assembly.

Opponents counter that it is no coincidence that Proposition 51 shadowed the liability insurance crisis. They blame the situation largely on mismanagement within the

Gann initiative would cause big 'exodus from UC'

By Michael Scott-Blair
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A November ballot initiative that would limit the salaries of all state employees to $64,000 annually would destroy the University of California's ability to continue as a top-quality university, UC President David P. Gardner said here Friday.

Called the Gann initiative after its chief sponsor, tax-cut advocate Paul Gann, the measure would cut the salaries of about half the UC faculty and all its top administrators and there would be an immediate exodus to other universities around the nation, he said.

Gann's proposal is that the governor's salary be fixed at $80,000 — $5,000 less than it is scheduled to be on Jan. 1 — and that all other state employees receive a maximum of 80 percent of that, or $64,000.

This would effectively close down serious scholastic work at the state's public medical, dental and veterinary schools, because few medical professionals would work for $64,000, Gardner said. Many of the UC system's top engineering, business and law school faculty would find better-paying work outside the state, he said.

"If passed," Gardner told the UC Board of Regents, "the initiative would freeze or reduce the salaries of thousands of university personnel, the overwhelming majority of whom are members of the faculty on whose scholarly and scientific reputation the university's worldwide distinction and standing rest."

Gardner himself, who receives $178,000 a year plus other benefits, expressed the feelings of many top university people when he said that if the initiative passes, "it will be a problem for my successor. I won't be here."

As written, the initiative could actually cut salaries to $50,000, he warned, depending on whether the initiative is interpreted as setting a ceiling on salary or "compensation."

He said that as written, the initiative refers to a maximum "compensation" level at 80 percent of the governor's $80,000, which could mean the $64,000 would include health and other benefits, cutting the actual top base salary to about $50,000.

Universities don't get Nobel laureates, top scientists, doctors or any other professionals for $50,000 a year, UC leaders warn. The UC system has 125,000 employees and a $6.5 billion annual budget. That makes it one of the largest employers in California and equivalent to any company in the upper echelons of the Fortune 500.

Its top officers could quickly command salaries in private business of more than twice the limit established by the Gann measure, and they would do so, campus leaders say.

Gardner told the regents that at the June meeting in Los Angeles he will report the full impact by campuses and by departments. He said he expects that will reveal a "devastating" impact on the university's ability to maintain any reasonable standards of academic or administrative quality.

There is some feeling that the university might be protected against direct impact from the initiative by its autonomy under the California Constitution, but Gardner said he doubts this.

Meanwhile, in a move aimed at almost doubling the university's education abroad program, the regents have approved three new exchange programs, with universities in Japan, South Korea and Costa Rica.

Gardner expressed concern that less than 1,000 of the 135,000 UC students study abroad while tens of thousands of foreign students study in this country.

The three new programs will be at the Sophia University in Tokyo and Yonsie University in Seoul, South Korea, both programs opening in the fall of 1987, and the University of Costa Rica beginning in January 1988.

Ten students will be selected for Tokyo where they will study the Japanese language but take academic courses in English. Yonsie University, the oldest university in South Korea, will take 30 students fluent in Korean who will enroll in the regular university courses.

The Costa Rican campus will take 30 Spanish-speaking students plus 10 fourth-year medical students who will study clinical practice at the University of Costa Rica Medical school for the spring.

County board moves to reorganize EPWA

By Patrick McGreevey

SAN BERNARDINO — With the head of the Environmental Public Works Agency retiring, the county Board of Supervisors Monday approved a major reorganization of the agency.

Eight positions were eliminated, including the deputy administrator's for an annual salary savings of $447,843.

Approximately $280,135 of the savings will be used to offset the anticipated cost of allowing administrators who chose to retire early an additional two years of service credit.

By Monday's deadline for accepting the early retirement offer, announcements of retirement have been made by eight county administrators, including EPWA Administrator Jack Peddy.

Other administrators retiring, their positions and years of service are Joe Czvik, the assistant personnel director, 33 years; Bob Clinton, communications director, 32 years; Don Meyers, chief deputy sheriff, 32 years; Robert Graham, chief deputy recorder, 21 years; Esther Penchan, administrative assistant to the board of supervisors, 20 years; Glen King, administrative analyst, 13 years; and Robert Davis, building and maintenance construction manager, 19 years.

Needles Justice Court Judge Jack Massey has also applied for early retirement, according to Harry Mays, the county's personnel director.

The EPWA reorganization eliminates three deputy administrator positions, those for public works, support services and development services. In addition three secretary positions and two administrative analysts were eliminated.

All of the people in the EPWA positions will be transferred to other jobs, Mays said.

The county board was able to eliminate the eight EPWA positions by taking from the agency the Housing and Community Development Department, Energy Resource Management division and Affordable Housing functions and placing them under a new department to be called the Office of Infrastructure.

"The result of these transfers is a reduced span of control for the EPWA administrator which would no longer necessitate the Deputy Administrator level," wrote Mays in a report to the board.

The new Office of Infrastructure was authorized by the board four months ago to coordinate the provision of streets, schools, water and sewer services and other needs to developing areas. Its administrator will be hired using an unused administrative position in the office of the County Administrative Officer, so no additional cost will have to be budgeted, according to C.A.O. Robert Rigney.

Meanwhile, 2nd District Supervisor Cal McElwain said he chose Monday to wait until a future meeting to bring up his proposal to reorganize the Department of Public Social Services as well in order to make the head of that department a full-time, rather than a part-time position as recommended last week by the county Grand Jury.

Carnegie proposal to boost teaching receives support

By Christopher Reynolds
Copley News Service

State officials — the leaders who educators say are crucial to implementation of the Carnegie Foundation's proposal to "redesign" public schools in America — are prepared to back the foundation's major proposals, Carnegie officials were told Monday in San Diego.

"The nation's governors, I can guarantee you, are not going to walk away from this," said New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, who served on the 14-member Carnegie task force that drafted the new "A Nation Prepared" report.

The Carnegie report calls for public education to raise the job of teaching to professional status by restructuring the way teachers are educated, giving teachers more responsibility and salaries up to $72,000 a year, and establishing a national teacher certification board to raise standards.

Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, chairman of the National Governors Association, announced Monday that he would move the Carnegie recommendations to the top of his organization's agenda when it meets in Hilton Head, S.C., in August.

Alexander said in a prepared statement that governors are "ready to make radical changes in the teaching profession."

Utah Gov. Norman H. Bangert issued a similar statement. "We're not talking about making things marginally better. What this report says is things have to be radically and dramatically better," Kean said in an address.

Also Monday, the leader of the nation's largest teachers union — who had expressed doubts about some of Carnegie's findings — confirmed that she would strongly support a national teacher certification board.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, who served on the Carnegie task force, had issued with the report a statement of reservations that criticized the idea of making some teachers "more equal" than others.

But Futrell said Monday that at this summer's NEA convention, she would ask her organization — long opposed to the idea of a national teacher certification board — to change its position.

"I think there will be a lot of debate," Futrell said. "But I think the delegates will support it ... We've already begun to lay the groundwork."

Albert Shanker, the president of the American Federation of Teachers and another member of the Carnegie group, has for the last year and a half been calling for a national certification board.

Monday was the last day of the conference, and most of the morning was given over to statements of support from representatives of various states. Bill Honig, California's superintendent of public instruction — who has been a constant presence at the Carnegie gathering — led a succession of speakers from this state.

Costs of EIR revision regarding quarry swell by another $20,010

By Patrick McGreevey

SAN BERNARDINO — The need to revise an environmental impact report on a proposed sand and gravel quarry north of Rancho Cucamonga resulted in the county Board of Supervisors Monday boosting the contract for the report by $20,010 to a total of $53,555.

The contract with Michael Brandman and Associates is being paid for by Fourth Street Rock Crusher, which deposits the money with the county's Land Management Department, which in turn pays the consultant.

"As a result of the complex nature of the project and the nature of comments received, the funds presently allowed are too limited to complete an adequate report," said Land Management Director John Jaquess, in a report to the Board.

The consultant was overwhelmed by comments from Rancho Cucamonga residents and business people opposed to the use of 425-acre area north of the city to dig up sand and gravel and process the mined aggregate into concrete mixtures.

Residents expressed concern about water contamination, noise, dust, truck traffic, air pollution, the use of explosives and the effect on property values by the sight of the facility.

An earlier report on the project's environmental effects was sent back to the consultant three months ago by the county's Environmental Review Board for revision to address all of the residents' concerns.

R.C. thriving on debate of issues, mayor declares

By Marianne Aiken

Rancho Cucamonga Mayor Jeff King told a group of people from local churches Saturday morning debate is what makes the city great.

"We are young, we are energized, and there is a bit of debate and controversy," King told an audience at the city's first mayor's prayer breakfast at the Clarion Hotel. "It is this exchange of ideas that makes Rancho Cucamonga a community of shared effort and shared endeavor."

King talked about how Rancho Cucamonga's population has grown from 44,000 in 1978 to 73,848 as of Jan. 1, making the city with a $23 million budget the third largest in the county.

As an example of the level of controversy in the city, King mentioned a parks assessment issue. The issue was settled in March by a superior court judge's ruling that the city clerk did not have to continue processing a petition with more than 5,000 signatures on it calling for a ballot initiative requiring two-thirds voter approval on any city assessment after April 1, 1985.

Development is another key issue in the city, King said. He emphasized the necessary balance between residential, commercial, and industrial growth.

"If one aspect of that balance is played with, it affects the other parts," he said.

Traffic circulation is one way to measure the city's growth, King said. The mayor said residential growth should be moderated to keep pace with the development of the Foothill Freeway, which is still 15-20 years in the future.

Sixth-graders treated to six special classes

John Robert Powers has adopted the sixth grade students at Alta Loma Elementary School.

Helene Kent from John Robert Powers will be teaching six one-hour sessions on Thursday afternoons from 1:30-2:30 p.m. The classes will cover subjects to give the sixth graders more poise and self-assurance: posture, body language, wardrobe and make-up.

Bob Sorenson, vice principal, Alta Loma Elementary School, will be video taping the sessions.

The Alta Loma Elementary School Site Council will be presenting John Robert Powers with an adoption certificate at the Volunteer Tea, hosted by the PTA on June 4 at 3 p.m. in the school cafeteria.
